Please join a congressional briefing to discuss the implications of NAFTA 2.0 for our air, water, climate, and communities. While the Trump Administration is eager to send its NAFTA 2.0 deal to Congress soon for a potential vote, congressional leaders have made clear that the environmental components of the deal pose real threats and must be changed. As leading environmental organizations, we are spotlighting the elements of NAFTA 2.0 that would help corporate polluters outsource more jobs and pollution to Mexico, lock in fossil fuel dependence, and challenge our hard-fought environmental protections. We will hold a panel briefing, followed by a question and answer session, to discuss the environmental implications of NAFTA 2.0, and the essential changes that must be made to protect our air, water, climate, and communities.
