

Climate Visuals Workshop: Time for a new visual language for climate change?

Climate Visuals is partnering with the World Resources Institute's Global Climate Program to run a half-day event featuring perspectives and insights from leading experts in climate photography and communication, including Adam Corner, Director of Research at Climate Outreach and Dennis Dimick, co-founder of Eyes on Earth and ex-environmental editor at National Geographic.

The workshop is for communications professionals, journalists, social science researchers and photographers who want to develop a more diverse visual language for climate change.

Harmon Center, World Resources Institute, Washington DC

September 21st, 2018

13:30 - 18:30pm (with reception and networking from 17:00)

For more details & to sign up, go to www.climatevisuals.org/events

WORLD
RESOURCES
INSTITUTE

ClimateVisuals

a Climate Outreach project

In partnership with the WRI's
Global Climate Program

@climatevisuals

climatevisuals.org